

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A DVD player receives output control information for controlling output of an audio signal to output lines, from an AV amplifier apparatus, and determines output channels for the audio signal 5 based on the output control information. When decoding audio data recorded on a DVD and generating an audio signal, down mix processing is conducted as occasion demands, based on the output channels determined based on the output control information.